The oil you are using is good and I do not believe the trouble lies there, if you use enough of it. The water system probably needs a good cleaning out, and the engine should be cleaned of carbon, the ignition gone over and set properly. See that the fan belt is not slipping. I would advise you to treat the clutch with neatsfoot oil in order that it should not take hold too suddenly. It may be that the leather is either badly worn or cut, in which case a new clutch leather is necessary, care being taken when put on that the copper rivets are countersunk properly in the leather.
